He is an American transgender man from Fredericksburg, Virginia. He is still a virgin. He says: “One of my biggest fears is finally meeting someone who is as turned on by me as I am by them and that leaves us together in bed for the next few weeks and they start getting to know me and I start to care for them and love them and they just leave because it’s not reciprocated. So, I don’t know, it’s just the way I am. I’m like, ‘If I could just do this one thing – just get laid – I would be happy.’” He is a rather successful investment banker. He came out four years ago. He told Out magazine: “In my early 20s, I didn’t identify as trans, I didn’t feel like I was trans, I just was. My mother is really religious, but she loves me. I’m not sure how she knows. I wouldn’t want to force myself into anything, but maybe I should.” He is married and has a 2-year-old daughter. He is adamant that he has been around the block enough times to know how to have sex without having the emotional complications that he believes are the only thing standing in his way of enjoying his sexuality. When asked if he was “ready” for his first time he says: “If you’re asking me if I feel ready for it, I don’t know.” He has had sex before, with men, he admits, but not women. He seems to believe that he was born to be heterosexual: “I’m not straight. I’m not gay. I’m not bi. I’m just me. I don’t know what else to say. I’ 82157476af
